Nopal cactus, also known as prickly pear cactus, can be grown for appearance, food and commercial value.. Ensure the soil drains well and has a sufficient mix of organic and inorganic material.. Scoop the flesh, including the seeds, into a sieve and mash it up Once the pulp is loosened from the seeds, rinse away the pulp and spread the seeds on a paper towel to dry.. A mix of half perlite and half peat moss works well or you can mix the perlite with sterilized compost.

Place the cut end of the cutting approximately 1 inch into the soil; just deep enough to prevent it from falling over.. Watch for signs of growth within four to six weeks; these signs include the cutting plumping up and new growth tips forming.. Place the cutting in the sun, and position the pad to align the thin sides northsouth to prevent the sun from burning the cutting during the hottest part of the day.. Prepare a planting mixture by combining 20 percent top soil, 10 percent peat moss, and 70 percent pumice. Principios Presupuestarios Lic Ronald By Jiriam Retana

If nopal cactus will not grow in your area, continue to grow the cactus as a house plant.. Nopal grows relatively quickly and requires little attention Using a sharp knife, remove a cutting from the parent cactus just above a stem joint between pads.. Square the end of the cutting off and dust the cut with rooting compound Allow the cut to air dry for one to two weeks until it has completely callused. ae05505a44 Календарь С Номерами Недель скачать
